Next in Importance

To the teacher is, of course, the text-book. To get along with an ill-suited, ill-contrived book — what a waste of energy it is! Sometimes, though, the routine work of instruction can go on very pleasantly with a poor book. There are many plausible books, superficial, inaccurate and unphilosophical, that make the student believe he is accomplishing a great deal when really he is learning something to unlearn. It has always been the endeavor of Ginn & Company to provide books that are at once easy to handle and thoroughly excellent. It makes a great difference, after a long and tedious course of study has been completed, whether the results are soundly good and permanent, or are like a rope of sand laboriously constructed, but falling away at a touch. All who are interested in text-books are likely to send to Ginn & Company, Boston, New York and Chicago, for their common school catalogue or their high school and college catalogue. The former describes such successful books as Wentworth's Arithmetics, Montgomery's American History, Stickney's Readers, Classics for Children, Tarbell's Lessons in Language, National Music Course, etc. The latter gives information about the most popular high school books published in this country, such as Wentworth's Mathematical Series, the Allen & Greenough Latin Series, Goodwin & White's Greek Series, Myers's and Montgomery's Histories, Hudson's Shakespeares, Gage's Text-Books of Physics, Young's Astronomies.
